WHERE IS THE CENERAL SIECEL?

From the lengthened absence of the schooner General Siegel, it is only natural to infer that she has either foundered at sea, or got stranded on the French Frigate Shoals, or some of the islands to the north-west. But what about the crew? Is there to be no search for them, or are they to be simply numbered with the missing? Surely six or seven men's lives are worth chartering a schooner and sending in quest of the missing men. Even if not found, some trace of the old craft in which they sailed hence might be found. Their intended destination is known, and they are now three months overdue. Would it not redound to the credit of the Government to utilize the Kaimiloa on this mission, instead of despatching her to Samoa on a pic-nic? The company which owns the missing schooner has other vessels at its disposal, and it is surprising that it does not make a move that will have for its object, a clearing up of the mystery. The age of apathy about the fate of half a dozen human beings is past, more particularly when it is within the power of those interested to settle the question in a few weeks.

WONDERFUL MEMORIES.

In order to meet the requirements of the age, it is absolutely necessary that a restaurant "boy," or waiter, be possessed of a wonderful memory. It is an important part of his vocation to receive two or three orders, at once convey them to the chief cook, receive from him the edibles constituting the fulfilment of a previous order, return to the cuisine, deverything in a restaurant is French nowa-days) and from thence convey a hundred and one plates, and distribute them to the respective parties who ordered them, and all this to be done without making a single mistake. The ordinary servant-girl would say that nothing is easier than to take two or three orders at one time at the table of a private family, but it remains for an accomplished Chinese restaurant waiter, to receive and deliver half a dozen orders of the following nature: "Tomato Soup," "Boiled Codfish, Lobster Sauce;" "Corned Beef and Cabbage;" "Escallops of Veal;" "Lamb and Green Peas;" "Spring Chicken ;" "Potatoes Mashed, Baked Sweet Potatoes and Lima Beans." After discussing each dish with a celerity both amusing and amazing, the epicure who delivers such an order, will, whilst engaged in dissecting his Spring Chicken, give an advance order for the next course, something after this style: "Plum Pudding, Jam Tart, Black cap pie, finishing off with Ice Cream, Cheese and Coffee." Similar orders to the above can be heard daily in Honolulu restaurants, more particularly where menus are provided. Whether good for the gentleman who furnishes such an order, or not, does not appear to trouble him, but would it not be more merciful on your servitor to simply say, pointing at the copious menu, "I guess I'll take this ere lot straight?" and thereby avoid taxing his elastic memory, and rendering him liable to have a plate of hot soup poured down the back of his neck for having delivered the wrong order to the wrong person. Waiters are human, and to test their patience with such orders as the above, is inhuman.

COLONIAL BORROWING.

This morning's Advertiser has an article on "Australasian Finance," in which colonial borrowing is dealt with, and the present reactionary tendency in the colony of New Zealand referred to. The British colonies in Australasia have certainly been wonderful examples of national borrowing. It was a mania with them there at one time. Some of the colonies, notably South Australia, held back for a while, and spurned the idea of incurring any liability for any purpose whatsoever, unless considered imperatively necessary. But they eventually caught the contagion, and became as much infected as their neighbors. Borrowing was, in our opinion, a correct thing for those colonies to do. They had immense resources, in unoccupied fertile lands and rich undeveloped mines. For the opening of the country to an industrial population, roads, bridges, and wharves were needed, and mainly for the construction of these, borrowing was resorted to. But after commencing, the colonial governments did not know when and where to stop, and kept on, in some instances, until they had overstepped the bounds of prudence. They appear to have been suffering the consequences of late, and are now beginning to think they should have stopped before. Borrowing by a private individual may be sometimes wise and profitable-profitable to the borrower and to the lender. But a man may borrow too much, or, for a foolish purpose, and thereby ruin himself and the person from whom he borrows. This is also true of governments. The Australasians borrowed mostly for beneficial objects, but they seem to have borrowed rather too much, and the people who are called upon to pay the interest are complaining. Let us in the Hawaiian Kingdom not fail to profit by the experience of our Southern friends. We have had an idea of borrowing for a long period past, and have branched out of late in that direction. This paper has always held that a limited amount of borrowing for reproductive works is sound policy for this country; but has never endorsed the Government's methods and objects of expenditure. If the money borrowed had been wisely used, we should have had its equivalent in results to-day. Whereas, there is but little to be seen as the production of our national debt. It is to be hoped that the new loan, yet unexpended, will be used to better advantage. The mistakes of the past should be beacons of the future. It is to be hoped also that this country will acquire sufficient sense to stop before it becomes so deeply involved as some of the Australasian colonies.

COLLISION OF ELEU AND PILOT BOAT.

The following copies of documents sent to the Minister of Interior by Captain Rice, explain the collision of the tug boat Eleu and the pilot boat :-To His Excellency L. Aholo, Minister of the Interior-Sir: I regret to have to report that a collision occurred on Monday, the 14th instant, between the steam tug Eleu, under my command, and a whaleboat belonging to Capt. Babcock, a pilot of this port. I was proceeding out of the harbor taking provisions to the whaling bark Ohio, which was lying outside, and when near the bark Josephine, also lying outside, Captain McDonald wishing to speak that vessel, I approached her, and as I ran close to the starboard quarter of that vessel, the whaleboat came around from the port quarter and I did not discover her, my attention being given to the ship I was nearing, until too late to stop the headway of the tug, which collided with the boat, damaging the same considerably and capsizing the occupants into the sea. I sincerely regret this accident, and its nearly fatal effect to those in the boat, But I feel that it was an unavoidable accident, that the best of care could not prevent under the circumstances. I feel it my duty to report this matter to Your Excellency, and also beg to submit herewith the evidence of Captains Lapham, of the Josephine, and McDonald, of the Ohio, which is voluntarily given in my behalf.

Your Excellency's obedient servant, JOHN RICE, Capt. tug Eleu.

We, the undersigned, testify as follows in the matter of collision between the tug Eleu and Pilot Bab-cock's boat: We were just leaving the Josephine and rounding the stern, found the tug close upon us, and the accident occurred and was unavoidable, as they could not see until too late to change their course or stop their boat. And I, Captain McDonald, also testify that I was on the tug Eleu at the time the accident occurred on the way to the Ohio. We were desirous of speaking the Josephine, which vessel was directly on our route to the Ohio. Just as we were close to the Josephine the pilot's boat shot out from under the stern and the collision occurred before we could stop the boat or alter the course. It was simply under the circumstances an

AN INTERESTING SPECIMEN.

By the W. G. Hall of last Wednesday, Mr. F. L. Clarke received from Mr. C. N. Spencer, of Hilea, a good specimen of a Hawaiian bat. The native name is "Opeapea" or "Olepe." The specimen sent measures 6 inches from tip to tip of the extended wings. The body is about the size of that of a mouse. The ears are quite large in proportion to the head. The profile to the little fellow shows a "snub" nose, retreating forehead and wide mouth, in fact, it may be called an "ugly mug." The specimen is preserved in alcohol, and will be placed in the National Museum.
